Welcome to the online version of World Regional Geography. This month you will be exploring the world's cultural regions through online exercises, websites, online videos, and online writing. This course is entirely online so will be important for you to build yourself a schedule for completing your work each week. By the end of this course, you should be familiar with aspects of the physical, cultural, economic, urban, and population geographies of the world's regions.

The majority of your grade will be based on your essays on each world region. In order to do well in this course, you must actually do the work. This class will be all about active learning and writing. I have posted a number of videos and websites for each world region. I expect you to watch the videos and complete the exercises on the websites, and show evidence of it in your essays and projects (one region's writing assignment is not an essay). There is a rubric posted for your essays. I strongly encourage you to use the rubric to guide your preparation. There will also be a final exam based on information taken from the essays and videos. There is no textbook for this course.

Several of the regional folders have a country identification game website for that region. For extra credit, play the country game, take a screenshot with your score, and upload it.

This semester moves very quickly. Please do your best to keep up. Everything needs to be finished by the day of the final. I do accept late work, but unless you have an excellent excuse, there are points deducted depending on how late.

Learning Outcomes:

- Students will be able to critically think and critically write about key themes in regions across the globe
- Students will be able to discuss the relationship between the physical and human geographies of the world's major regions
- Students will be able to identify patterns of migrations by examining the origins and diffusion patterns of cultural traits such as language, religion, foods, and forms of dress.

Grading:

Each essay is worth 12.5% of your grade, as is the final exam.
